

Auroch Puzzle

What is an auroch?

An auroch is an extinct species of wild cattle. It lived in Asia, Europe, and North America, and is the ancestor of domestic cattle. They had big horns and were much bigger than the cows we have today. The species survived in Europe until 1627, when the last recorded aurochs died in Poland.

An auroch bone was found on the Mesolithic site of Bouldnor Cliff, off the Isle of Wight! You can find out more at: www.maritimearchaeologytrust.org/Bouldnor

Cut out the auroch skeleton pieces, then try and put it back together!
